

Where's the Calendar? ... Look up.

As children of Jehovah we should make ourselves familiar with His calendar. He has left us with the Scriptures to calculate and identify His moedim. (His appointed times, seasons.) If they were not important, or left to the discretion or arbitrary alteration of man, He would not have so clearly outlined their demarcation in His holy Scriptures. He told us when a day starts - when a day ends - when the months start and when the beginning of years are to be marked.

When the earth was finished it brought forth its first fruit -- The day. The first complete day was the seventh day of creation and the Sabbath began the world as we know it. These seven days were to be considered a measurement of time forever -- A week . The week is the last vestigial element of Jehovah's calendar that continues to the time in which we live. The measurement of the day has been polluted. The measurements of months and years have been polluted. However, the week is the last measurement of time that has remained, and try as one might to find a historical rationale for doing so, there is no reason to measure the week in this arbitrary fashion other than the record of Scripture that the week is, indeed, seven days long.

You can use the information in The Creator's Calendar DVD to compile your own Sacred Biblical Calendar! (One thINKer drew the calendar on his wall!) Look for the new crescent to mark the beginning of the month. Mark on your calendar when you see the new moon (the crescent). Count 29 days from that day, and that night, start looking in the evenings near the setting sun for the next new moon! So, where's the Calendar . . . right where it's always been!

"Watch ye therefore: ... And what I say unto you I say unto all, watch."

Thoughts!

Hey, Don...

You know the best picture we can have in today's world of what Sabbath SHOULD look like was yesterday [12-25-15]! No groceries, unmanned gas stations, no pizza delivery, no one working, eating at home with family, rest, meaningful contemplation, some of the nastiest people I know being thoughtful and appreciative and benevolent Crazy how this pagan holiday is the only way to see a little picture of Sabbath in our world.

I think people's spirit recognize this goodness and rightness in their Christmas and have no presence of mind to separate what is right from what is wrong. ~ThINKer in Ohio

My heart wondering how you are and to apologize for not writing sooner. I have been working very long hours sometimes till two in the morning and then twenty-four/seven.

Certainly the events in the world is pointing to the beginning of the end and yet peoples hearts are so hardened by their survival efforts. I have reserved myself to the fact that I am a child of the most high and therefore what can man do to me?

Things are not looking very good in S.A. jobs are very scarce. The reality is hardship and famine. We are in the worst drought in since the sixties and yet people are not perturbed by this. Its just the biggest, the best, flashiest goods and a chasing after the wind. Crime is out of control, unemployment is 40%. The events is Syria and Russia in the midst of it all is just another confirmation of prophecy. Matthew 24 ~ThINKer in South Africa

Thanks for the email you sent. I give Yahuwah Elohim aka El Elyon, thanks for those like you who are not sticking to well worn (at least in recent centuries) paths, but are honestly seeking to follow Yeshua, with the help, leading, of the Ruach Ha Kodesh, to better understanding and more acceptable expression of His life in you, by His Word. I pray that He will richly bless you, and keep you, and shine His face upon you, and give you peace as you journey in these perilous times on the path He leads. ~ThINKer from the Internet

REPLY FROM DON: We are broadcasting all day, every day on www.ThinkRedInk.com and www.ThinkRedInk.tv and have the mobile App "TRI Radio" which can be downloaded on a smart phone and the 605-477-5075 listen line. People are reporting that they are receiving the audio/video from the Think Red Ink server. So, unfortunately it appears the problem is on your side. Perhaps you can try a different browser or use the call-in number. There are so many factors. Perhaps simply clicking F5 will reload the page and restore your service. If that doesn't work, your browser "help" will instruct you on how to delete cookies and cache (stored web pages), which will allow you to retrieve a fresh webpage from the server. Sorry to not have more help for you. Let me know if you get it working.

HOWDY DON! UPDATE ON PROBLEM---IT IS FIXED. WE ARE ABLE TO GET PROGRAMMING AGAIN. THANKS SO MUCH FOR YOUR HELP -- WE DID A SYSTEM CLEAN. MISSED YA LOTS! ~ThINKer from Internet

Thanks, enjoy message, life changing, totally agree with lessons, learning and confirming a lot in my spirit...so glad you are out here... I was stuck in the Word of Faith camp for years and years, I had no clue it was satanic philosophy and ego worship...have previously sent you an email...What Does Faith Mean ...web site is a work in progress not much content yet...heard you on the Jesse Lee Peterson show...How do people make donations to your ministry? Thanks again.

PS. me and my family kept the Sabbath for the first time, after I heard your teaching, absolutely amazing to wait on the Lord with my family, and teach the kids how important God's Law is...the kids will have an advantage in life no doubt. ~ThINKer from AR

REPLY FROM DON: I am sending the book "On Sabbath," and "The Guest within our Gates" pamphlet which is available on www.ThinkRedInk.com home page under "Featured Articles." A copy is attached for your convenience and reference. There is no charge for these materials.

Modern society has been schooled by church and club memberships to expect a deadline and a set of prerequisites to enter "the club." I have been led to instruct listeners to relax, not compelling "set steps." I follow the example of Jesus and direct people to keep the commandments. You are well on your way... as proven by your act of obedience in keeping the Sabbath. Obeying the commandments is a HUGE step in receiving daily guidance from the LORD.

In answer to your question, here is the website link explaining donations: www.thinkredink.com/contributions.htm/

Your materials will be there soon!

I want to run something past you, and while I'm waiting for your reply in the next few days, I'll get my ducks in a row to show where I'm coming from. I just started a new job back in Feb. Union gig, and of course I'm on the bottom of the totem pole. In the beginning, before I was even hired, I explained that I do not do any work on Sabbath unless it benefits someone other than me or my family.

I got called in to work a Saturday a while back. Was told I didn't have much option, being that I'm low man. At first I gave them hell. Then I prayed on it, if I'm not supposed to work, He won't allow it to happen. Of course I still was called in. But it still wasn't sitting right with me. So the idea came to me that I figure up what I had earned that day, pull it from my check and donate it. . . .

I figure if anyone on this planet can justify my actions to be within the commandments, you can. Of course if I'm wrong I'm wrong and I'll deal with it. I for one want to know if what I believe is truth or not, no matter how painful it may end up being. ~ThINKer from the TRI RADIO APP

REPLY FROM DON: You know it is my contention that we must keep the Commandments, never violate our conscience and take time every day to hear the voice of God. When I read your email this sentence stood out to me... "But it still wasn't sitting right with me." We must develop the practice of obeying our own conscience. One time I asked a Rabbi, "Just how are we to keep Sabbath?" "Is there a simple rule?" His reply was probably the best advice I've ever heard pertaining to Sabbath - he said, "In any situation you should always ask yourself, 'Can this [the work] be done on some other day?'"

In your situation, Sabbath cannot be kept on some other day. There are two obligations, first, to your employer, like it or not you have entered an agreement. If you mutually agree to amend that, you will be able to fulfill your commitment to YHVH with no repercussions. If not, your testimony will suffer for your lack of trustworthiness as an employee. So which is more important your commitment to God or your commitment to your employer? Don't answer too quickly. We can easily obey God's commandments and allow our testimony to be hollow, shallow and vain. If that is so, we have taken God's name in vain. Can keeping one commandment cause you to violate another? I don't think that is so.

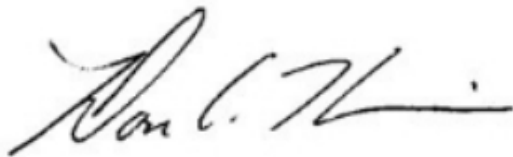

Jehovah [God] knows. This is a two-edged sword. The decision to violate the commandment has already been made. Now, we must do damage control. You keeping the fourth commandment will never serve as a testimony of your faith in God to a person who has no concerns for God or your religious preferences; however, we can try to salvage your character as a Christian in your employer's eyes. This will go a long way in him respecting your conviction in the future. As I said, Jehovah knows of your decision in the past to jeopardize your keeping of the Sabbath; your violating the Sabbath will not come as a surprise to Him. However, your dedication and commitment to your employer as a Christian will soon become a tool for you to feel God's mercy and forgiveness and perhaps supernatural experiences in your job.

Don't let this discourage you. Be faithful. Be thoroughly Christian. I have seen situations like this turn around so fast, it will make your head spin, but, not if you continue to ignore your conscience. Make amends. Do penance. Not necessarily with God by donating money, but with your employer. Apologize to him for your weakness in obeying your convictions. He will soon learn that it is your faith in God that places you head and shoulders above every employee he has. Jehovah will deal with the Sabbath issue, you wait and see.
